The numbers don't speak for themselves.

We've all sat, staring at a page of numbers, looking for the meaning between the lines. But those numbers will never be more than marks on a page, until someone can translate them into real insight.

At TNS Social our researchers are more than just experts in survey design and execution. We give you the insight and intelligence that comes from looking behind the numbers, beyond the trends...and between the lines.

As the largest research company in the UK we have been conducting social research for more than 25 years. As specialists in public sector research our expertise lies in conducting large scale social surveys, evaluation of policy initiatives and publicity campaigns, and surveys to measure satisfaction with public services.

ABOUT US

London Councils (formerly the Association of London Government) was formed in April 2000 from a merger of the five borough-funded London-wide bodies that remained outside the new Greater London Authority. These were the previous ALG, the Greater London Employers' Association, London Boroughs Grants, the London Housing Unit, and the Transport Committee for London. Most of the staff from these five organisations moved into offices at 59½ Southwark Street, close to London Bridge, in March 2001.

London Councils represents all 32 London boroughs, the City of London, the Metropolitan Police Authority and the London Fire and Emergency Planning Authority, which all pay an annual subscription to cover the organisation's running costs. London Councils is consulted formally by the Government and is in an ideal position to advise on a wide range of issues relating to local government and other matters of concern to Londoners. It also works closely with the national Local Government Association and with many private, voluntary and public sector bodies.

Our main functions are to:

- Provide a single voice for our member authorities, where possible;
- Lobby for adequate resources and the best deal for the capital;
- Lead on policy formulation and debate on key issues affecting London and Londoners;
- Act as the employers' organisation for the London councils, providing advice, support and training and representing them in negotiations;
- Provide specialist housing advice and analysis on behalf of the 24 boroughs which pay an extra subscription;
- Allocate more than £28 million in grants to voluntary organisations serving more than one borough; and
- Provide or manage certain London-wide transport and traffic services. These include the Freedom Pass, which allows more than a million older and disabled people to travel free on London's buses, tubes and trains.

Our main policy committee is the Leaders' Committee, made up of the leaders of the 33 London councils. Following the May 2006 elections, no single party has a majority on the Leaders' Committee. A new Executive has been formed as a forum for detailed policy development. The executive comprises 11 councillors in proportion to party representation on London Councils and most hold a portfolio such as housing or crime. More information is available at www.londoncouncils.gov.uk. Each of the three main parties represented on London Councils has a political adviser.

Organisation structure

There are eight main divisions within London Councils. Details of their roles and functions are listed below. The European service is run under contract by Greater London Enterprise.

Central and Support Services: Internal finance and administration, IT support, and reception.

Communications and Public Affairs: Media relations, parliamentary affairs, conferences and seminars, publications (including the London Bulletin, London Housing and this London Councils' Directory) and various websites.

Corporate Strategy and Performance: Business planning, performance improvement, staff development, personnel. CSP also runs the main member meetings and leads on special projects and equalities issues.

Housing Policy: All aspects of housing, including policy work, housing benefit and specific services to 24 boroughs subscribing to the LHU Committee.

Local Government Finance: All aspects of local government finance, including central grants and council tax.

Improvement and Employment: Acts as the local authorities' employers' representative for London, and negotiations with the local government unions on pay and conditions. The division provides a research and intelligence service to boroughs on all aspects of human resources, and gives help and advice on organisational development, best value and best practice. IE also hosts the London Centre of Excellence and Capital Ambition.

Social Policy and Grants: Covers many policy areas including community safety, culture and tourism, economic development and regeneration, education, health and social care, refugees and asylum seekers. The section is also responsible for allocating £28 million a year in grants to more than 400 voluntary organisations.

Transport, Environment and Planning: Transport and planning policy, traffic and parking enforcement (including managing the London Lorry Control Scheme), concessionary fares and regulatory and environmental issues. The concessionary fares schemes include the £213 million a year Freedom Pass that provides more than a million older and disabled people with free public transport, and Taxicard that offers subsidised taxi travel to nearly 58,000 disabled Londoners. The section also operates the Parking and Traffic Appeals Service (PATAS) and is responsible for appointing independent lawyers as adjudicators to consider appeals against liability for parking and other penalty charge notices issued by the London authorities. The adjudicators handle more than 45,000 appeals a year. PATAS handles a similar number of congestion charge appeals on behalf of Transport for London.

A brief history

The 32 London borough councils were created in 1965 at the same time as the Greater London Council (GLC), replacing the old London County Council and the metropolitan boroughs that had governed London since Victorian times. The City of London remained intact. The borough councils and the GLC covered a Greater London area of some 1,580 sq km and a population of over seven million.

For 21 years, the borough councils and the GLC provided the two-tier system of London government. Responsibility for services was split, and in some cases – such as roads, housing, planning and leisure – responsibility was shared. The GLC was responsible for London public transport, the fire service, flood prevention, information and research. The borough councils had responsibility for environmental services, consumer protection, personal social services, libraries and swimming pools. While the 20 outer borough councils were responsible for education, in the 12 inner boroughs (and the City of London) education was provided by the Inner London Education Authority (ILEA), an offshoot of the GLC.

The GLC was abolished in 1986. The services previously provided by the GLC were shared out between central government, the borough councils and a new set of London-wide bodies. Councils took sole responsibility for housing and – after ILEA was abolished in 1990 – education.

In 1994, the Government Office for London was set up as part of a system of regional government offices throughout the country.

Recent changes to London's government

In May 1998, a referendum was held on the re-introduction of a democratically elected strategic authority for London, with a directly elected Mayor and Assembly. Londoners endorsed the setting up of the 'Greater London Authority', as it was named, by a three to one majority.

The first election for the Mayor and Assembly members – 14 constituency members elected by the first-past-the-post system and 11 pan-London members elected by proportional representation from party lists – took place in May 2000. Powers were formally transferred to the Greater London Authority (GLA) on 3 July 2000.

The elections made history in the UK: this was the first ever directly elected Mayor; the systems used for the elections

– supplementary vote for the Mayor and the additional member system (AMS) for the Assembly – were new in England; and it was the first time that electronic counting had been used in a major election. The second Mayoral and Assembly elections were held on 10 June 2004.

There is a clear separation of powers between the Mayor – who has an executive role, setting an overall vision for London and defining clear strategies – and the Assembly, which has a scrutiny role. The Mayor has a duty to develop strategies on air quality, bio-diversity, culture and tourism, economic development, transport, waste and a spatial development strategy to set the overall framework for land use and development.

The Mayor has powers over transport and economic development through two executive bodies, Transport for London and the London Development Agency and appoints members of the Assembly and others to their boards. The Mayor also appoints Assembly members and others to the boards of the Metropolitan Police Authority and the London Fire and Emergency Planning Authority which oversee the Metropolitan Police and fire services respectively. In 2007, the Mayor's powers will be extended – see www.londoncouncils.gov.uk/glareview

The 32 London borough councils and the City of London continue to provide the majority of day-to-day services for their residents, including education, housing, social services, environmental services, local planning and many arts and leisure services.

Several of the London-wide bodies which had been set up after the GLC was abolished were transferred into the GLA – the London Planning Advisory Committee, the London Research Centre, and the London Ecology Unit – while other bodies merged to form the new Association of London Government, now known as London Councils.

THE LONDON BOROUGHS

The Local Government Act 2000 triggered some fundamental changes to the way councils are run. It set out three possible models, and left it to each individual council (and its residents) to choose which system to implement. The three options are:

A directly-elected mayor and cabinet. The mayor, once elected (for a four-year term), selects his or her cabinet from among the councillors. The cabinet members need not all be from the same political party. A directly-elected mayor has much more power than the traditional, largely ceremonial, mayor.

A leader and cabinet. The leader is elected annually by the council, and the cabinet members are either appointed by the leader or elected by the council. Again, the cabinet can be either single-party or a coalition.

A mayor and council manager. The mayor is directly elected for four years to guide and influence the day-to-day work of a professional officer, who plans policy and takes decisions.

Whichever structure is chosen, all councils must have at least one overview and scrutiny committee, made up of councillors who are not cabinet members. Such committees, which have to reflect the political balance of the council, can make policy and budget proposals, monitor and review performance, and call in or review decisions made by the executive.

In London, 29 of the 32 boroughs are run by a leader and cabinet, while three (Hackney, Lewisham and Newham) have a directly-elected mayor and cabinet system. All the cabinets in London have between seven and 10 members.

BOROUGH ELECTION RESULTS MAY 2006

There were widespread changes to the political map of London following the 2006 local elections.

Labour suffered badly, losing control of eight boroughs: Bexley, Brent, Camden, Croydon, Ealing, Hammersmith and Fulham, Hounslow and Merton. In Lewisham, Labour failed to win a majority of seats, but they remain in control through the directly-elected mayor. Labour won control of Lambeth.

The Conservatives won control of seven councils: Bexley, Croydon, Ealing, Hammersmith and Fulham, Harrow, Havering and Hillingdon. They did suffer one upset though, losing Richmond upon Thames to the Liberal Democrats.

The Liberal Democrats had a mixed night, winning back control of Richmond after four years of Conservative rule but losing overall control of Islington.

The British National Party won 11 seats in Barking and Dagenham, and others in Havering and Redbridge. The Green Party also won some seats, including six in Lewisham.

The Conservatives now control 14 boroughs, Labour eight, and the Liberal Democrats three. The other seven are hung, with no party in overall control.

The next borough elections will be held in May 2010.

ABOUT THE DATA

Explanatory note

All the information contained in the following borough pages has been supplied by the boroughs themselves, with the exception of the area, population and ethnic breakdown figures (all from the 2001 Census with headline population figures revised by ONS in 2006); the figures on school and pupil numbers (2006 DfES statistics); unemployment statistics (Jan-March 2005 local labour market indicators, ONS); and housing tenure statistics (Housing Strategy Statistical Appendix 2004/05, DCLG). Housing tenure percentages have been rounded to the nearest whole number so may not add up to 100 per cent. Each authority's band D council tax figure is as reported by the DCLG. Budget is the net budget requirement as recorded by the DCLG and excludes school expenditure.

Mayor: Ken Livingstone LAB

The Greater London Authority Act 1999 set out a new and unique form of strategic and city-wide government for London, working in the interests of Londoners. The GLA is made up of a directly elected Mayor – the Mayor of London – and a separately elected Assembly – the London Assembly.

There is a clear separation of powers between the Mayor – who has an executive role, making decisions on behalf of the GLA – and the Assembly, which has a scrutiny role.

GLA – continued

The GLA's main areas of responsibility are transport, environment, planning, economic development, policing, fire and emergency planning, culture and health. These responsibilities are administered through the affiliated and functional bodies of the Metropolitan Police Authority (MPA), Transport for London (TfL), London Fire & Emergency Planning Authority (LFEPA), and the London Development Agency (LDA).

The total budget of the MPA, TfL, LFEPA, LDA and GLA for 2006/2007 is nearly £10 billion. The budget for the GLA itself is about £122 million in 2006/2007, including £58 million for the first financial contribution from London council tax payers to support the cost of staging the 2012 Olympic and Paralympic Games (38 pence a week on a Band D council tax bill). Most of the remaining cost of the GLA is met by central government grant, with Band D council taxpayers in London contributing just under 18 pence a week.

The LDA is one of nine regional agencies (RDAs), established by the Government to promote economic development and regeneration. It is one of the four functional bodies of the Greater London Authority and reports to the Mayor of London. It consults and works with the Greater London Authority, London Charter Partners and a wide range of public and private sector partners.

The LDA's three main roles are:

Promoting success

The LDA is responsible for the promotion of London's success and growth, working to retain and attract more investment and trade and encourage more business visitors, tourists and students to London and the UK.

Supporting inclusion

The LDA invests directly in initiatives which help people, especially in disadvantaged communities, enhance their skills, develop businesses and secure jobs. The LDA focuses its resources on areas of greatest need, such as deprived parts of London, and areas of greatest opportunity, such as emerging business sectors.

Renewing London

The LDA co-ordinates investment and direct support for deprived parts of London, to unlock the potential for new homes, jobs and community facilities and to help deliver major initiatives such as the 2012 Olympics and Thames Gateway development. It also makes the case for better and new infrastructure in areas in need of renewal.

The London Fire and Emergency Planning Authority (LFEPA) is responsible for fire and emergency planning in London. It runs the London Fire Brigade.

The Authority's work includes advising about fire safety, enforcing fire safety laws and carrying out various emergency planning activities including helping London councils plan for emergencies.

The Government's approach to modernising the fire and rescue services in the UK gives the LFEPA specific additional responsibilities for responding to road traffic accidents and to other emergencies, including major emergencies or terrorism, and more flexibility on how to plan and respond to risk.

The membership of the Authority is 17 members, all appointed on an annual basis by the Mayor of London and comprising nine members of the Assembly and eight borough councillors nominated jointly by the London boroughs through the ALG. The chair of the Authority is appointed annually by the Mayor.

The Authority meets on a six-week cycle, normally on Thursday afternoons at Hampton House and the meetings are open to the public.

Community Safety

LFEPA emphasises community safety and its firefighters are working hard to reduce the number of fires (and the deaths and injuries they cause). The Authority is also developing partnerships with a range of agencies in the public, private and community sectors so that it can play its full role in efforts to improve community safety. The Authority has set up a borough-based structure so it can develop local links and work with local people (particularly with the London councils) to develop new ways of improving community safety. Each borough has a borough commander who is responsible for the full range of services provided by the Authority within that borough.

For more details about the Authority's work, visit the website at www.london-fire.gov.uk

The Metropolitan Police Authority (MPA) is responsible for maintaining an effective, efficient and fair police service for London and ensuring the capital's police are accountable for the services they provide.

The MPA holds the Commissioner to account for the delivery of police services in London and also works to improve performance and standards, while operational responsibility for the service is in the hands of the Commissioner.

Since it was established in July 2000, the MPA has made good progress in increasing the Metropolitan Police's public accountability and bringing more rigour to its financial management - a crucial element of the MPA's role is responsibility for the police budget, more than £2.9 billion each year, and how it is spent.

The MPA's tasks include:

- increasing community confidence and trust in London's police service;
- securing continuous improvement in the way policing is provided in London;
- publishing an annual policing plan in consultation with London's communities;
- setting policing targets and monitoring performance regularly against those targets;
- overseeing the appointment and discipline of senior police officers;
- overseeing formal inquiries and the implementation of their recommendations; and
- being accountable for the management of the police budget.

MPA – continued

An essential part of the Authority’s role is to listen to the real concerns of Londoners about crime and policing to inform the annual policing plan and the setting of priorities for the forthcoming year.

The Authority conducts its formal business through meetings of the full Authority, on which all 23 members sit, and separate smaller committees with specific responsibilities, such as finance, equalities and performance, composed of fewer members. All meetings are held at the MPA’s offices and are open to the public and media. Agendas, reports and minutes for meetings are published on the Authority’s website.

The effectiveness of the MPA is determined by the contribution of its 23 members who play a major part in setting the strategic direction of the Metropolitan Police, improving police performance and ensuring that people from all of London’s communities (whether they live, work in or are visiting the capital) receive a fair and non-discriminatory police service.

MEMBERS OF THE EUROPEAN PARLIAMENT

The European elections were held on 10 June 2004, the same day as the GLA elections. The proportional representation voting system introduced for the 1999 European elections was used again, with voters asked to vote for a party (or an independent candidate).

The Conservatives won 26.8 per cent of the vote, with Labour taking 24.8 per cent, the Liberal Democrats 15.3 per cent, the UK Independent Party 12.3 per cent and the Green Party 8.4 per cent.

The percentages converted into the election of three Conservative, three Labour, one Liberal Democrat, one Green Party and one UKIP candidate. Other parties, including the Respect coalition and the BNP, won 12.4 per cent in total, but none of these parties individually won enough votes to gain a seat.

Syed Salah Kamall replaced Theresa Villiers who was elected MP for Chipping Barnet in May 2005.

The nine London MEPs are:

Gerard Batten UKIP

John Bowis CON

Robert Evans LAB

Mary Honeyball LAB

LEARNING AND SKILLS COUNCILS

In April 2001 the National Learning and Skills Council replaced the Further Education Funding Council and the Training and Enterprise Councils. It is a non-departmental public body with responsibility for planning £8 billion of public money (budget for 2003/04), and more than six million learners.

There are five local learning and skills councils (LSC) in London, responsible for the funding, planning and quality assurance of colleges, school sixth forms, work-based training for young people and adult and community learning.

A new single LSC for London is being proposed as part of the extension of the Mayor of London's powers in 2007.

Have you seen the London Bulletin?

London Bulletin is the magazine for London local government, providing news, views and analysis of government policy as it affects the capital's councils. Produced six times a year, London Bulletin is sent free to every London councillor. London councils can order additional copies at a rate of just £15 a year, others can order their own copy for just £30 a year. Read the current issue online at www.alg.gov.uk/londonbulletin

London Bulletin is published six times a year by the Association of London Government. To subscribe contact Emma Stewart on 020 7934 9754 or email emma.stewart@alg.gov.uk
